

Tradition said the city library would have to operate with limited resources.

Inspiration saw it another way.

The Jefferson-Madison Regional Library is an extraordinary source of knowledge for our community. In 1992, the Friends of the Library established a fund in CACF to encourage private gifts and bequests. These gifts are used to support and expand the audio book collection, to fund summer internships for minority students, and to grow the Library's general collection—all beyond what would have been possible with local tax dollars. There's no end to what we can do together.

Charlottesville Area
COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

434.296.1024 / www.cacfonline.org

Tradition said the city library would have to operate with limited resources.

Inspiration saw it another way.

In 1992, the Friends of the Library established a fund in CACF to encourage private gifts and bequests to an extraordinary source of knowledge in our community—The Jefferson-Madison Regional Library. These gifts are used to support and expand the audio book collection, to fund summer internships for minority students, and to grow the Library's general collection—all beyond what would have been possible with local tax dollars. There's no end to what we can do together.

Charlottesville Area
COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

434.296.1024 / www.cacfonline.org